Four Millions Idle
Bibles and Prize Fights
We Rebuke Liberia
Not to the Poor House
By Arthur Brisbane

BETWEEN FOUR and five millions of men are idle in the United States, according to Chairman Woods of President Hoover's committee on unemployment. Fortunately, it seems safe to say that the peak of idleness has about been reached, with better conditions coming.

Big cities might improve their methods of relieving those actually hungry. John Brisbane Walker writes that he saw in New York city "several thousand men shivering on the sidewalks in Seventh ave., between 22d and 24th, and the Franciscan Church on 31st st., feeble, old men, sickly youths, strong looking workers." They were waiting to receive the large sum of $10 cents, and, at the same time, according to Mr. Walker, the city's armories, large buildings, nearby, stood empty and heated.

Our civilization does fairly well in producing wealth. But it doesn't seem to know quite what to do when the machine breaks down temporarily. As for the slummers of one gentleman that the Red Cross can attend to present distress, that is dangerous doctrine. The Red Cross couldn't attend to even one difficulty, if it tried to.

An unpleasant incident occurred in Arkansas, when farmers came to the town of Ede and entered stores, demanding food for their children. They got it.

In Newark, N. J., yesterday, a hundred unemployed men, led by so-called "Reds," marched on the City Hall. Policemen's nightsticks disposed of them, with the aid of mounted police. Something more systematic is needed.

Our national "depression" works impartially. Bible Society receipts are down for 1930, fewer Bibles sold. And prize fight promoters in New York took in during 1930 $3,262,000 less than they took in the year before.

That will make it necessary for some politicians to look elsewhere for funds needed. But what a profitable source of support the prize fight graft must be.

Secretary Stimson warns the Negro Republic of Liberia that slavery must be abandoned. Investigation proves that high officials of the Negro republic, including the Vice-President, are engaged in the slave trade, and permit it.

This seems surprising, considering that Liberia was planned as a haven from slavery.

But, many of our best people, black and white, approved of slavery a little while ago, and we can hardly blame the Liberians for lagging a little behind, especially as slavery is about the only source of revenue.

A slave owner gave his slave enough food and clothes to keep him living, and to worry about him when sick.

Modern industrialists gave their workers enough to eat, and go, and need not worry about him when he's sick. In the eyes of Providence, there may not be a great difference between bodily slavery and what our Socialist friends call "wage slavery."

President Hoover, in an encouraging address to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, points out that the millions of Americans using automobiles are "not riding to the poor house."

The President sees in the Department of Commerce report, 3,500,000 new automobiles, made and sold last year, besides accumulated stocks disposed of, a decrease in the use of gasoline, as compared with "the highly optimistic year of 1929."

The President's reminder that one American is every ten is, directly or indirectly, pointing out the automobile industry is important. The President says "hundreds of miles of new roads are being built every day in the world," offering new space to new cars, and encouraging the industry.

Get a 1931 model if you can. Buy American cars. Two homes now, in one in which he sleeps, one in which he rides.

The United States recognizes the new government of Guatemala, and the grounds that the provisional Andrade did not enter into a contract with the United States.

What difference has the President made in, since he is in.

Our first President came to by a considerable coup d'etat, but included, kicking King George out of the country. Nations of France came in by a disreputable coup d'etat, but we recognized him. Why not say to each country, "Fix your own government."

ELY SWORN IN, ASKS AID FOR JOBLESS

Huge Throngs Jam the State House and Applaud New Governor to Echo

A record-breaking throng broke into tumultuous applause that rocked the aged walls of the State House today as Joseph B. Ely of Westfield finished repeating his oath of office and became Governor of Massachusetts.

The crowd filled all the chairs on the floor and in the galleries of the House of Representatives, occupied several hundred camp chairs placed in the aisles and filled every foot of standing room. It overflowed into Gardner Auditorium, where amplifiers carried the words of the state-accepting address, and scores stood about in the corridors to watch glimpses of the ceremony the notable.

It was a striking contrast to the first Democratic inauguration of Governor of the Bay State since 1918.

Mrs. Ely, new first lady of the Commonwealth, watched it all proudly, her eyes glancing at times with emotion.

The inaugural address of the new Governor, contained the plea for lagging a little behind, especially as slavery is about the only source of revenue.

A slave owner gave his slave enough food and clothes to keep him living, and to worry about him when sick.

Modern industrialists gave their workers enough to eat, and go, and need not worry about him when he's sick. In the eyes of Providence, there may not be a great difference between bodily slavery and what our Socialist friends call "wage slavery."

HOUSE MODIFIES Ely's Neighbors Get Tickets, But Others GRIL FLIERS UP 5-AND-10 LAW

Washington, Jan. 8 (INB)—The first modification of any prohibition legislation in years was accomplished by Congress today when the House unanimously approved the Stobbs bill, which softens the drastic Jones "five and ten law," under which it has been possible to inflict a fine of $10,000 for any violation of the Volstead Act.

The action of the House today sends the bill to President Hoover for signature.

Under the Stobbs bill, a class of petty prohibition law violators is created for which the maximum penalty would be six months at jail and $500 fine.

The maximum penalty of the Jones law, however, would still apply to the "big" bootleggers.

POPE ISSUES ECYCLICAL ON MARRIAGE

Birth Control, Divorces, "Companionate" and Mixed Unions Denounced

Vatican City, Jan. 8.—Birth control, trial marriage and divorce were scathily condemned today in an encyclical of Pope Pius XI, reaffirming the Catholic doctrine of the sanctity of matrimony. It was the first such expression of the Holy See on this theme in 50 years.

The encyclical, containing 10,000 words, drew upon the full resources of ecclesiastical authority for its precepts, which, mandatory on the faithful, the pontiff said he hoped to be accepted by all men.

He expressed himself as follows: BIRTH CONTROL—Those prescribing birth control the pontiff described as "branded with the guilt of a grave crime. Abortions is termed 'murder.'"

DIVORCE—The second Catholic doctrine of the indissolubility of marriage for any reason whatsoever is reaffirmed.

MARRIAGE—Its sacred, permanent character, reaffirmed by the holy father, who lists its essentials as children, conjugal fidelity and honorable obligations.

SEX EDUCATION—The Vatican agency has the right, the pontiff declares, to impair or destroy the generative function of the body. He advised, however, that modern woman—she owes obedience to her husband but not the sacrifice of dignity or to the point of obeying unreasonable requests.

STERILIZATION—No human agency has the right, the pontiff declares, to impair or destroy the generative function of the body. He advised, however, that modern woman—she owes obedience to her husband but not the sacrifice of dignity or to the point of obeying unreasonable requests.

Garrett took his "protection" money and his liquor, too.

Garrett took his money, and raised him $15 times. Four times while paying for protection he was arrested and found not guilty in court—with Garrett a witness on three of those occasions.

John F. Sullivan, 64, with hair like snow, hands that moved restlessly and a voice hardly above a whisper, continued from the witness stand at the Garrett trial today his own story of his own shakedown by Oliver B. Garrett, ex-police raider; Garrett's wife and Miss Lillian V. Hatch.

SULLIVAN TELLS HOW GARRETT GOT BOTH HIS MONEY AND PAID

RAIDED 15 TIMES WHILE IN PRISON

cross-examination likely to be even more lengthy will be begun by Gallagher and Mr. J. J. Callahan.

The danger raid was always a matter of the police squad which raided the girls, Sullivan testified.

GOT MUCH LIQUOR

"At one time they came to the hotel and went to the fourth floor and got $400 or $500 worth of liquor," Garrett claimed he did not know a warrant was out, Sullivan said.

TELLS OF PAYING

Payments at the Blackwood at address to Miss Hatch or Garrett himself were made on the first of the month—like the rent—said. From the time Sullivan went to work in the cloakroom of the hotel he paid her about a year after he first paid Garrett until the time of the old hotel was closed in 1928, he paid her the "rent" tribute, he told the judge and jury.

RAIDERS ARRIVE

"Mr. Garrett and his men arrived in about 15 minutes and they raided the hotel. They raided the fifth floor but did not get the liquor."

WHY WHISPER

"Sullivan, when with no display of emotion, said during the constant questioning of the 15th day of the trial, that he had been in the hotel on occasion from one foot to another and obviously was hearing the conversation, which was being held in the room of the hotel."

IN 15 RAIDS

"Mrs. Hatch would warn me when the raid was coming," Sullivan testified. "Sometimes the raid would not come for two or three weeks after."

WAS GARRETT ON THESE RAIDS?

"Always," was the answer. Between 1925 and 1928, Garrett and the liquor squad raided the hotel 15 times, he said. Whether or not they had warrants he did not know.

He recalled his arrest for keeping and expiring in May, 1929. Previous to being arrested his place was raided and Garrett was with the raiders, he said.

ON JUDGE KEATING'S SUGGESTION

Doyle inquired how long previous to his arrest the raid occurred.

THE SAME NIGHT

"The same night," he answered.

ALWAYS GOT FREE

"He was found not guilty and discharged but he had no memory as to whether, on that occasion, Garrett was a witness in court."

RAIDED BY GARRETT

Asked by Garrett, preceded his arrest in October, 1929, February, 1928, and December, 1928, he testified. On each of those occasions Garrett appeared in court as a witness and he was found not guilty, he said.

INTERVIEW OF RECORDS

Interference of records of municipal court warrants for raids on Sullivan's hotel, preceded by Gallagher's most strenuous objections and the longest conference of counsel. Immediately after Judge Keating ruled that they were inadmissible, Gallagher began his constant objections which, being overruled, he asked to be heard.

WILL FIND REASONS

"For the purpose of the record I want all my rights saved and while I can't think of all the reasons right now, I will think of more between this trial and the Supreme Court," he said. "Every time I speak in objection like this I would like to have you understand that I am speaking for the two female defendants. My objections are based on the irrelevancy of this testimony as far as Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch are concerned."

TELLS OF PAYING

Payments at the Blackwood at address to Miss Hatch or Garrett himself were made on the first of the month—like the rent—said. From the time Sullivan went to work in the cloakroom of the hotel he paid her about a year after he first paid Garrett until the time of the old hotel was closed in 1928, he paid her the "rent" tribute, he told the judge and jury.

TELLS OF PAYING

"Miss Hatch told me she received no money for making the collection for Garrett at the Hotel Ritz club," he said.

$50 IN ENVELOPE

"Mr. Garrett was given $50 in the envelope on one occasion, Sullivan said.

AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE REASON

Judge Keating told the jury that Sullivan's testimony was not to be taken into account.

MAY I AGAIN IMPRESS UPON YOU

the importance of not talking about this case when you leave here today. I ask you again to be careful not to permit anyone to talk with you about this case, either in person or by telephone."

SULLIVAN STEPPED FROM THE STAND

and started to leave the room, Garrett watching him closely, when Deputy Sheriff Donovan said: "I am in all right. Not until Garrett had been taken from the stand."

POLICE OFFICERS AND COURT ATTENDANTS

cleared a passage for him and escorted by three policemen he returned to his home.

GOVERNOR ELY TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Chicago, Jan. 8 (U.S.)—Running seven months of intensive investigation to a dramatic climax, State's Attorney John A. Swanson today led a nattily-dressed, college-boy type of youth before a assemblage of newsmen and named him as the man who shot and killed Alfred "Lone" Lingie, Chicago Tribune reporter, who turned racketeer.

"This is the man who killed 'Lone' Lingie," said Chief Investigator Paul Roche. "We will ask his indictment for Lingie's murder."

The prisoner's name was given as Leo Brothers, alias Leo Bado, reputed slayer and terrorist of St. Louis. He is 32 but looks younger.

Brothers has been identified by several who witnessed Lingie's murder by a lone assassin in the Randolph at pedestrian subway last June 9, Prosecutor Swanson said.

Investigation has disclosed Lingie was put on the "spot" by a killer hired by gambling interests who the gang overlord, furnishing cash, crossed or harassed through excessive protection levies.

It was on a tip from one of Alphonse Capone's lieutenants that Brothers' name was given authority as the killer, according to underworld reports. Lingie was known to be an intimate friend of Capone interests with protection which he denied rivals.

companied; steps to prevent acquisition of New England railroads by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

With the last word of the oath of office, word was flashed to the roof of one of the wings of the capitol where National Guard soldiers waited. Swiftly they passed on to comrades on the Common and the field pieces of Battery B, 101st Field Artillery, boomed out a 15-min salute.

The first gun was the signal for the crowd to move on. The governor no longer, to don his hat and pass smilingly through the corridors and out of the building, in accordance with tradition, he passed through Doris hall on the third floor. Others applauded as he appeared on the portico and started down the terraced steps, and he smiled graciously as he walked.

At his foot of the steps, on Beacon, his wife awaited. She stepped forward, threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. It was a touching scene and for a moment the crowd was silent, then breaking forth into a fresh tribute as the governor entered an automobile, and was driven away.

His brother, Harry Allen, and the state's wife were also on hand to receive him back into the ranks of plain citizens. Police, together with State House guards, had their hands full handling the crowd as they entered the capitol building.

Some managed to find standing room, others crowded into the press gallery, but most were content with seats in Gardner Auditorium. Meanwhile the Chamber of the State House arrived at the State House at 11 o'clock, accompanied by his son, Richard, and his Lieut.-Col. Terrell M. Ragan, and were direct to Governor Allen's office, where the two shook hands cordially and chatted for five minutes before closed doors.

QUEBEC ROCKED BY QUAKE

Quebec, Jan. 8 (AP)—The principal topic of conversation in many parts of the province today was an earthquake which sent inhabitants rushing from their homes, toppled books from shelves and stopped clocks.

The tremor was felt here, in Montreal, and in many villages shortly after 7 p. m. yesterday. In the Laurentian mountains villages of St. Tite des Champs and St. Perre, the quake was severe enough to cause the villages to shake out of doors in four.

The quake was the strongest since 1925. At Quebec the quake was recorded as beginning at 7:14:52 p. m. and lasted six minutes. The epicenter was estimated to have been 275 miles distant.

Corbett, Mr. Jan. 8.—Residents of this section reported today that a slight earth quake was felt at 7:16 o'clock last night. The frame was reported along the St. John River at Van Der, Malawaka, and across the Canadian line at Edmonton, N. B.

'What's $25,000?' Cries Lita; Carpenter Mum

New York, Jan. 8 (U.S.)—"I don't know, I tell you, I don't know! There were four of them. They said they'd 'put me on the spot' if I talked. I don't want to sign a complaint. Twenty-five thousand dollars—what's that? My life is worth more to me!"

Thus Lita Grey Chaplin, world-famous picture star, answered queries at the door of her hotel suite here early today after being held up, kidnapped in her own car, and robbed of jewelry valued at $25,000.

Kidnaped with her was Georges Carpentier, one-time contender for the world's heavyweight championship.

Highlights of Inaugural Ceremonies in State House

A floral tribute from the parents of Governor-elect Ely was the only floral piece in the House chamber when the inaugural ceremony was started.

The huge bouquet, among the first of many received at the State House, was ordered sent to the House chamber and placed on the Speaker's stand by the Governor-elect. A tribute to his parents, the bouquet contained carnations, roses, acacia and heather.

Demond Fitzgerald, who as a member of the State Patrol acted as body guard to Governor Fuller during his term in office, was also present at the ceremony today. Governor-elect Ely announced that he had picked Fitzgerald as his body guard before he went to the House chamber to be sworn into office.

Many persons arriving early for the inaugural exercises were able to find that more than a white sheet was needed to give admittance to the House chamber. A white sheet would admit the State House, but another sheet, marked with a blue stripe, was necessary to gain access to the chamber.

The Gardner Auditorium was packed with guests who attended the inauguration ceremonies.

DU TOWNS LAWS CALLED BLOCK TO BUSINESS

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP)—Rome C. Stephenson, president of the American Bankers Association, in discussing before the Chicago Association of Commerce the background of business conditions, said today that outworn laws in restraint of trade had prevented comprehensive efforts to make progress to consumption.

Mr. Stephenson warned that unless business men can eventually solve the unemployment issue, solutions will be attempted by a government in which business men will have but a small part.

The present system under which each corporation aims to gear its production and sales according to its own ideas, irrespective of the industry as a whole, he said, leads to dissatisfied, human suffering, political upheavals and unwise legislation.

Efforts to stabilize industry are making progress, Mr. Stephenson explained.

"Already large employers of labor are arranging production so that employees can look forward to regular work, and eventually when their stint is done is a pension for their sunset years."

Discussing the farming situation, Mr. Stephenson pointed out that farm mortgages independence increased in the 20-year period ending 1929 from 10 per cent of the value of the farms to 25 per cent.

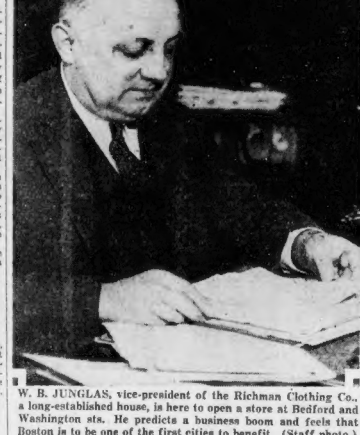

"If the farmers are ever to get under this load, it will be through some plan of reduced costs by means of increased output by unit of labor," he commented.

"The development of power machinery in farming has served to reduce the cost of production in a few areas and has caused abandonment of farms in others."

Looking ahead, Mr. Stephenson concluded that:

"As month succeeds month, inventories in America will be reduced, thus hastening the day when unemployment will give way to employment, and in consequence demand for production will be before long and buoyancy of spirit."

Great Faith in Boston

W. B. JUNGLES, vice-president of the Richman Clothing Co., is seen here with a group of people. He is standing in the center, wearing a suit and tie, and is looking towards the camera. The group is standing in front of a building, and the scene is outdoors.

Boston was selected at the site for the first New England store of the Richman Brothers Co., general clothing manufacturers and retailers, because a survey of several months showed it offered splendid business opportunities, according to W. B. Jungles, vice-president of the concern.

Mr. Jungles, in Boston to supervise the remodeling of the building at Washington and Bedford at which will be occupied by his concern the latter part of February, declared today that with the opening of the store employment will be increased by approximately 25 persons.

Many thousands of dollars also will be expended by Boston contractors in renovating the eight-story building from cellar to roof which will be occupied by his concern the latter part of February, declared today that with the opening of the store employment will be increased by approximately 25 persons.

The company, the largest manufacturer of men's and young men's clothing, retailing at a set price of $22.50, was founded in 1884 and is the world's largest unit of New England manufactured cloth.

"Mill owners," Mr. Jungles said, "in referring to Richman Brothers say we buy cloth by the mile instead of by the yard."

"Another thing that led us to select Boston for our first New England store is the response given here to our mail order business."

"Likewise, my company feels that Boston will be one of the first cities to find its way out of depression, and we want to be here on time."

GRAPE RAISERS OPEN BATTLE

San Francisco, Jan. 8 (AP)—California grape producers came forward today with a plan they said would stop the country's bootleggers and, at the same time, benefit 150,000 persons and help to save the $250,000,000 grape industry from financial disaster.

The plan is contained in a booklet circulated by Fruit Industries, Ltd., a government-sponsored cooperative. The booklet implies Mrs. Mahel Walker Willebrandt, former prohibition prosecutor for the Department of Justice, became counsel for Fruit Industries, Ltd., to battle the bootlegger.

The booklet points out that the Volstead law does not prohibit fruit juices in the home. It urges the support of the legal method of obtaining grape beverages, both for the benefit to the grape industry in relieving the surplus production problem, and as a means of taking the profits out of illicit traffic in alcoholic beverages.

The plan includes utilization of part of the surplus grape crop in canned and concentrated juices.

Guns Guard House in Race War Threat

Kansas City, Jan. 8 (AP)—Police armed with riot guns and gas bombs maintained an all-night vigil at an apartment house here after demonstrations arising from a protest against the renting of quarters to Negroes.

After police had dispersed a crowd, nine carriers of Negro fixtures appeared, brandishing arms and then released, they told officers they were going to enlist reinforcements.

Lady Dorothy Mills, the well-known explorer, narrates her fearful experiences with the "leopard men" cannibals in Africa in the American Weekly section of the new Boston Sunday Advertiser. She shoots a leopard and the same bullet, she is told, drills the skull and brain of the leopard and the treacherous leopard men.

THE LAST MILE -- By Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER 40

SID HAD finished out his work and was taking his time to enjoy his golf, for heretofore he had seldom had the time for it and knew that he played an atrocious game. He had guest privileges at the High Ridge Club, and it was there that he met Nina Niswinger. She was with friends, but took time to cross over and have a few words with him.

"Something happened between you and—the man I am going to divorce. Won't you come over tonight for dinner and tell me about it. Mr. Cavanaugh?"

Sid promised.

Just before dark he arrived and she took him to the secluded west terrace to entertain him.

"There was a peculiar package on the little stand."

"Cactus candy—I adore it," Sid examined the package as he was opening it. There was a box on firm unmeasured on the label and the advertising about the candy. It didn't seem to him that these labels would be pasted over coarse brown paper. Niswinger had told him that he was going to Mexico. Sid recalled this suddenly.

"Wait—just a moment," he said, snatching the package from which she had removed the outer wrapping.

There was a flash and an explosion that hurried Sid off the terrace.

Sid Cavanaugh lay quite still in the grass where the explosion of the package had burst him.

Nina Niswinger screamed—and with horror at what had happened, for she hadn't felt the pain in her hands where the flame from the explosion had burned her.

The other and another servant came running out.

"Get Mr. Cavanaugh up to a guest room and send for Dr. Glidden," she ordered from where she was kneeling beside Sid.

Then she dropped her formalities. "Now save his eyelids faster."

"Sid—can you speak—can you sit up, Sid?" she cried.

One servant went back to telephone. The other helped to raise Sid to a sitting posture. He opened his eyes slowly and shook his head as if dazed.

"Zowie! What a cload in the head that was!" he said, thickly.

"His head, struck the corner of the sun dial base, m'wah," the servant said. "What was it that exploded?"

"That's all right—never mind now," Sid said as the servant helped him to his feet.

Nothing Serious

Nina put out her hands to steady him. He looked down at them.

"Nina—your hands! They're burned!" he cried.

"Try just a tick—they hurt terribly."

"Go and pour thick oil over them—have a doctor—"

"One has been sent for. Are you burned, Sid?"

"My neck, a little, the thing blew upwards," he checked himself.

"Take Mrs. Niswinger in and breathe her hands in oil," he ordered.

"You may be terribly hurt—come on in, please," Nina cried.

"I have to pick things up," he looked at her meaningly. "This blister won't bother for a while."

She saw the reddened spot on his neck and jaw. She understood what he meant—he wanted to gather up the fragments of that bomb. They exchanged glances.

Each read the other's thoughts. There was a bomb, from an enemy of Nina's, and her only enemy was her husband of so few months.

Sid folded up the wrapping paper, found the cover and picked up such fragments as he could in the fast fading light. Then he went inside where the doctor had banished Nina's hands. He was assured that her burns were slight, as was the burn on his neck. Sid explained about the blow he had received from a thing some time before. He had struck this time near that same spot. The doctor examined him.

No great harm had been done other than to momentarily irritate him. Nina Niswinger could trust her family doctor.

"I cannot afford publicity, doctor," she said, "and this isn't sufficiently serious to be reported to the authorities is it?"

He agreed. He knew that he would be paid well for it. Nina's millions were very real, and he knew it.

They had dinner. Nina could use the tips of her fingers. After that they examined the fragments.

"I remembered suddenly that he had gone to Mexico," Sid explained. "And that grapple didn't hit his hand and shrapnel shape as a can't concern would send out—this why I grabbed it."

"To save my?"

"Naturally, Nina. You had hold of the cover. I didn't know that. When I yanked there was some connection between cover and core so when the cover was lifted the thing would explode. That's why your hands were burned. From what I can see this was a very amateurish bomb. I suspect he made it himself—but it's hard to believe he would do so awful a thing as that."

"Sid Goes to Mexico"

"Not difficult at all to believe, Sid—he struck me, you know that. He knew I would divorce him. He knew that I had ousted him from his position in our mills and have secured what little stock he holds. I think he believed that if I were dead he would inherit everything."

"He told her, then, what he had done to Niswinger that time as called on him at his cottage upon his return from hiding, and he repeated Niswinger's threats to try and make scandal, because he happened to meet her in the garden one evening."

The next day they talked all afternoon. Sid found the remainder of the bits of the bomb and verified his guess that it was clumsy, amateurish and weak—otherwise both would have been killed.

HOOVER'S RAIL PLAN BACKED

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—President Hoover's action in connection with the proposed consolidation of national railroads into four trunk lines was defended in the House today by Chairman Parker, of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

The chief executive saw further delay in reaching an agreement as against the public interest, he said, and urged the railroad heads to take a plan for unification to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

He denied Mr. Hoover had approved any detail of the proposed consolidation and asserted the commission was not to be influenced by Mr. Hoover's action.

"Those who are accusing the President of usurping the authority of the commission should be specific and state what systems he has approved," Parker said.

The speech answered attacks by Democrats.

British Barricade Offices in India

Calcutta, India, Jan. 8 (AP)—Shootings of British police officials by Indian revolutionaries had led authorities to barricade many government offices. Only those bearing official papers are allowed to enter government buildings or institutions. Plots on the part of Indian agitators, bomb explosions, murders and other acts of terror are of almost daily occurrence.

Abyssinia Claims World Coffee Honor

Addis Ababa, Abyssinia, Jan. 8 (AP)—Abyssinia claims to have been the first country to give coffee to the world. The principal exports of the world, it said to have first been produced in the eruptions of Kaffa, whence came the name "coffee." From Kaffa, Arabian slave traders took the bean to Yemen and Mecca.

First Sight-Sound Play Put on Air From Chicago

By RUTH BALDWIN COWAN

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP)—A small audience in the control room of the WCAP last night watched what is believed to have been the world's first broadcast of a synchronized sight-sound dramatic production.

Frederic Wacker, Vincent Haworth and Douglas Hope made television history in their appearance in "The Master of Dreams."

The play went on the air to be received by those with a television and radio combination set, the first of its kind.

The make-up presents a problem. Experiments show that the best efforts were obtained with a thick coating of grease paint with the yellow and mouth outlined in a brownish-red. The result seen in person gave the notion of a Halloween ghost gone pale.

Hoover to Talk Senate Move

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—President Hoover will repeat the impending request of the Senate for return of the nomination of George Otto Smith, recently confirmed chairman of the new Federal Power Commission. It was learned today on highest authority.

The President has been informed by his legal advisers, the Senate has no power to compel the return of Smith's nomination.

The Senate has the power to remove Smith from office on July 1 by refusing to appropriate money for his salary.

Dr. Harold W. Hersey Dies in Springfield

Springfield, Jan. 8 (AP)—Dr. Harold W. Hersey, 48, superintendent of Springfield Hospital since last October, died today after a few days' illness of pneumonia. He came here from Bridgeport, Ct. He was born in Hingham, graduated from Harvard and practically ever since has been engaged in hospital work or teaching.

YOUTH GUILTY IN NEAR-RIOT

Dunham Francis, 18, Harvard freshman and one of several hundred students said to have created a near-riot on E. trains last night, in East Cambridge court today pleaded guilty to wilfully destroying property and disorderly conduct on a public conveyance.

He was found guilty by Judge Arthur P. Stone and his case continued to Jan. 10 for disposition.

The students were returning to Cambridge from Boston Garden, where the Harvard hockey team had defeated the University of Toronto.

Jubilant over the victory, the students expressed their feelings by breaking electric light bulbs and windows, and tearing down advertising cards. Francis was the only one arrested.

POPE CONFESSES DIVORCE AND BIRTH CONTROL

'COMBINATION' OF APPROPRIATE SCORE

Pontiff Also Bans "Mixed" Marriages Under In Line With Church Rule

persons to whom sterilization would be applicable not be married.

AGAINST NATURE
In his reference to birth control, which bishops of the Anglican church endorsed under certain circumstances at the Lambeth conference in London last summer, the Pontiff condemns all such practices as "against the law of God and of nature."

Regarding "mixed" marriages the Pontiff says:
"Many dangers their home and eternal salvation when without proper grounds they enter into marriage, which the Church wisely thinks is often the result of children straying away from their religious teachings."

On companionate marriage the Pontiff says:
"Some people have even gone so far as to invent new forms of a temporary union called 'companionate marriage,' which is nothing less than free love."

The Pontiff unequivocally calls abortion murder, the practice of sterilization of the physically weak is proclaimed "to be against the law of God. The Pontiff says that every man is sacred and that public magistrates can be given no power to harm the only, integrity of man, which a grave crime is concerned."

FEAR OF SUFFERING
The Pope criticizes those who claim that children are a burden, but in view, as Jesus did, of the child's life, instead of the suffering of the mother, the Pontiff declares he fully understands the fear of those who sufferings would be too great to permit children, but he advises chastity in place of contraception. Marriage, he points out, has far higher value than the mere satisfaction of physical passion.

Pope Pius XI takes a determined stand against the medical necessity of having a mother's life at risk to save the child's, instead of saving both mother and child. Legislators are admonished not to forget their duty in defending innocent lives. He maintains that the excesses of eugenics also call for criticism.

"LAW OF GOD, NOT OF MAN"
The Pontiff, referring to women's emancipation, points out that physiological emancipation means nothing less than avoidance of women's highest duty to mankind, namely motherhood. In the same breath he stresses woman's economic emancipation as largely an excuse for abandoning of family duties in pursuit of business and other occupations.

The Pontiff, calling attention to the fact that the modern world is "tired every morning?"

Pope Pius Denounces Divorces; Hits Mixed, Companionate Unions

"Divorce is fatal for nature. It opens new avenues of corruption in parliamentary and public life."

"Christ having said, 'Whoever repudiates his wife and takes another commits adultery'—just so, those who take a woman repudiated by her husband also commit adultery. Whoever God has united, man cannot separate. Once wedded, one remains wedded for life."

"Some people have even gone so far as to invent new forms of a temporary union called 'companionate marriage,' which is nothing less than free love."

Referring to mixed marriages:
"Many endanger their home and eternal salvation when without proper grounds they enter into marriage, which the Church wisely thinks is often the result of children straying away from their religious teachings."

"A great number of men either entirely ignore or shamelessly deny the great sanctity of Christian wedlock, or even, relying upon the false principles of a new and utterly perverse morality, too often trample it under foot."

"And since these pernicious errors and depraved morals have begun to spread even among the faithful and are gradually gaining ground, in our office as Christ's Vicar upon earth and supreme Shepherd and Teacher, we consider it our duty to keep the flock committed to our care from poisonous pastures and preserve it from harm."

to modern social conditions which have landed, the Pontiff says, to lessen the restrictions observed in other days, declare that marriage and the laws of marriage are made of God, not man.

Attention is called to the encyclical of Pope Leo XIII of half a century ago, in which the Pontiff says he not only affirms but makes an appeal to the present encyclical merely adapting it to modern conditions.

The Pontiff in explaining the purpose of his encyclical says:
"First of all, it is necessary that man's mind be illuminated with the true doctrine of Christ regarding (matrimony), and secondly, that Christian spouses be strengthened by their wills and strengthened by their hearts, and shape all their ways of thinking and of acting in conformity with that pure law of Christ so as to obtain true peace and happiness for themselves and for their families."

WHAT MEN IGNORE
"A great number of men . . . either entirely ignore or shamelessly deny the great sanctity of Christian wedlock, or even, relying upon the false principles of a new and utterly perverse morality, too often trample it under foot."

"And since these pernicious errors and depraved morals have begun to spread even among the faithful and are gradually gaining ground, in our office as Christ's Vicar upon earth and supreme Shepherd and Teacher, we consider it our duty to keep the flock committed to our care from poisonous pastures and preserve it from harm."

"These laws cannot be subject to any human decrees or to any contrary pact, even of the spouses themselves."

ST. PAUL, the Pontiff said, declares:
"I wish young girls to marry . . . to beget children, to be mothers of faith."

Both husband and wife, however profligate these children with love and gratitude from the hand of God, will regard them as a talent committed to their charge by God, not only to be employed for their own advantage but for the good of the commonwealth, but to be restored to God with interest on the day of reckoning."

The Pontiff quoted from St. Augustine in support of many serious in the encyclical.
"Saint Augustine," referring to this who from the beginning of married life took measures against having children, called the woman in such cases the "mere mistress of her husband and the man the paramour of his wife."

St. Augustine is quoted also to the effect that of the blessings of marriage the child holds first place.

condition of desperation that, having nothing which they fear to lose, they are emboldened to hope for a chance to advance from an upheaval of state and of established order."

The encyclical is divided into three sections, first, covering the dignity of Christian wedlock; second, errors opposed to Christian wedlock, and third, remedies for overcoming these errors. It is in the middle section that the Pontiff is most vigorous and emphatic.

HITS STAGE SHOWS
"Today, also," he says, "not secretly or under cover, but openly with all sense of shame put aside, now by word, again by writing, by theatrical productions of every kind, and now by radio, by amorous, frivolous novels, by cinematographs portraying in vivid scenes, in address broadcast by radio telephoning, in short by all inventions of modern science the sanctity of marriage is trampled upon and defiled."

"Divorce, adultery, all the basest vices are extolled or at least depicted in such orders as to be or appear to be free of all reproach and infamy. . . . Doctrines are defended . . . and are offered for sale as products of modern genius."

The Pontiff appeals to the state to assist in making home life easier by rendering medical attention.

As a guide and example, he refers to the Latin American states which have re-established holiness in their homes by the foundation of "civilization."

WOMAN'S FREEDOM
Citing the words of the apostle: "Let women be subject to their husbands as to the Lord, because the husband is the head of the Church," the Pontiff denies that this enjoins obedience to her husband's every command, or that it implies that the wife should be put on a level with minors to whom it is not customary to allow free exercise of their own will, or that it enjoins the wife to submit to their lack of mature judgment or of their ignorance of human life.

"If the man is the head," says the Pontiff, "his word is the heart, and as he occupies the chief place in ruling the state and ought to claim for himself the chief place in love."

"The subject of wife to husband in its degree and manner was never according to the different conditions of persons, place and time. In fact if the husband neglects his duty, it falls upon the wife to take his place in directing the family."

Subjecting the wife to a husband, says the Pontiff, who, however, forbids that exaggerated ideal which would make the husband of the family. It requires "heroic, noble obedience."

The Pope stresses the "invariable stability" of the marriage bond in explaining the Catholic doctrine of the sacramental character of marriage.

"ADORNED BY WEDLOCK"
The encyclical says:
"Man and wife, let it be known, not fettered but adorned by the golden bond of the sacrament, not hurried but assisted, should strive with all their might to be and last their wedlock, not only through the power and symbolism of the sacrament, but also through their spirit and manner of life, may be and may remain always the living image of that most fruitful union of Christ with the church, which is to be venerated as the sacred bond of most perfect love."

After detailing the influences of this modern day which tend to degrade and belittle the marriage sacrament, the encyclical declares:
"Not all the spouses of these new doctrines are carried to excess; there are those who, striving, as it were, for a middle course, have nevertheless, that something should be conceded in our times to the necessities of the world, the divine and natural law. But these, likewise, more or less willingly, are subservient to the great enemy."

"Indeed," he observes, "how can we expect that, in the security and to worldly wealth and the very life of civil society itself, when men are reduced to that condition of desperation that, having nothing which they fear to lose, they are emboldened to hope for a chance to advance from an upheaval of state and of established order."

The encyclical is divided into three sections, first, covering the dignity of Christian wedlock; second, errors opposed to Christian wedlock, and third, remedies for overcoming these errors. It is in the middle section that the Pontiff is most vigorous and emphatic.

who is forever seeking to sow cockle among the wheat."

"FREE LOVE" MARRIAGES
After many paragraphs devoted to the indissolubility of marriage, the encyclical proceeds in a discussion of free more modern forms of matrimonial union.

The evil of this (modern) teaching, the encyclical says, "is plainly seen from the consequences which its advocates deduce from it . . . that the generative power that these principles nature itself is more sacred and has more value than matrimony and hence may be exercised both outside as well as in the confines of wedlock, even though the purpose of matrimony be not attained."

"Arrived with these principles men see so far as to consent new species of union, suited as they say to the present tempo of men and the times which vary."

less new forms of matrimony they presume to label 'temporary,' 'experimental' and 'companionate.' These offer all the indulgence of matrimony and its rights without, however, being indissoluble, and without offering, unless later the parties alter their cohabitation into a matrimony in the full sense of the law."

BARBAROUS STANDARDS
The proponents of these marriage forms, the Pontiff says, do not seem to suspect that these proposals partake of nothing of the "modern" culture in which they glory so much, but are simply "barbaric" abominations which beyond all question naturally reduce our truly cultivated nature to the barbarous standards of savage people."

Proceeding to explanation of the evils opposed to each of the benefits of matrimony, the Pontiff considers first "offspring, which may have the boldness to call the deplorable burden of matrimony."

"They say," the Pontiff comments, "that children are to be avoided."

The Quick, Brilliant Story of a Strange Love Triangle

Logan Gets Sucky at Marquis' Actions

By MAY CHRISTIE
(Copyright, 1931.)
But she didn't believe poor Grace was a cut-as-wilda said. Lorna was invariably most agreeable to her.
When Logan came, Wilda would perhaps be more charitable in her judgments.
Though she did secretly hope (and really Arturo and Wilda were most friendly now, and the young man seemed so bona fide and genuine, and so thunderstruck at Giga's conduct) that there still might be a title in store for her daughter!
Logan arrived. A sunburned, high-spirited, happy Logan.
"This is a great promotion for me. But the main advantage was seeing you again!"
This as he kissed Wilda ardently at Antibes station.
He was spending the rest of the day and night at his hotel, and all of Sunday.
His duties at the new branch of the American Silk Exchange house in Cannes would start on Monday.

With Wilda
Those First Hours
But he would pass those first enchanted hours here on the edge of the Mediterranean with Wilda.
They drove to the hotel at Cap d'Antibes, in the car that had been lent to them by the American Silk Exchange.
"Isn't this swell?" cried Logan, "Remember our last ride together, coming back from Cannes, and you're here now!"
"I'm wonderful that this car is lent to me," Logan said, "and you're here now!"
"I'm wonderful that this car is lent to me," Logan said, "and you're here now!"

Owner Can't Oust Three Free Tenants
The story of the first keeper and the unworkable man was duplicated today by Max Sherman, a domestic real estate owner, who appealed to police to assist him in the removal of three tenants.
Sherman said that shortly after Christmas he found a man, his wife and child in an apartment which he thought was vacant.
Touched by their story, Sherman told them they might remain until after the Christmas holidays, but now he says they refuse to leave.

Philadelphia Clue to Missing Girl
Police here last night were checking with authorities in Philadelphia to try to determine if a girl found unconscious in a doorway in that city is Marion Roloff of East Fourth st., South Boston, who disappeared from home Jan. 5.
The girl found in Philadelphia when taken to a hospital for treatment gave her name as Max Roloff, and her address as English and Waltham aires, Boston. There is no such intersection in this city.

About 35 cadet officers of the Boston University R. O. T. C. unit, under Maj. William L. Colver, the commandant, and his staff, were among the guests of the First Corps Cadets, when that organization gave a reception to Governor Joseph B. Ely at the First Corps' armory last night.

Logan Shy Did Not Take to Lorna
It was a wild scene. Colorful as a musical comedy. Lorna looked to Logan, who was particularly taken to Lorna.
A big dance was given in the hotel that night. Lorna expected to have practically every dance with Wilda.
He was chagrined when a young Spaniard "billed" her repeatedly.
"That's the Marquis Arturo Rando y Rando, a great admirer of Wilda's," he was informed by the Marquis' Latin waiter from the dance-floor. "They've been going together for weeks," he said meaningfully. She had been drinking.
Lorna in the Bar. Lorna stated the woman.
But the Rando fellow stuck around all night. To get Wilda out of his reach, Logan had to take her away out into the walled area of the garden.
"That's the chap that has been with her!" Logan said.
"Why, how—just a pleasant acquaintance, Logan."
But Wilda sounded nervous. "I was thinking of the interest... she must be friendly."

3 SITES URGED FOR BATHHOUSE

When the Medford bathhouse project came before the Legislature, there will be three proposed sites. One was submitted by Representative Richard D. Crockett, which seeks to have it situated on the Lower Mystic lake.

Another has just been filed by Senator Charles C. Warren which would place it on the Mystic river, near the Harvard avenue bridge, where it would serve both Medford and Arlington. He also suggests that a swimming pool be constructed in the river.

The third proposal is by Mayor Edward H. Larkin, calling for the bathhouse on the Mystic river somewhere within easy walking distance of Medford.

Last year's Legislature appropriated $20,000 for this bathhouse, leaving the site in the hands of the Metropolitan district commission, which selected a location on the Upper Mystic lake in Winchester.

Winchester residents, the board of trade and the Winchester selectmen vigorously opposed a bathhouse within the town limits and at Medford's request, the matter was held in abeyance.

Do you know these facts About ORANGE-PEKOE TEA?
Do you know that "Orange-Pekoe" is not a kind or flavor of tea? Do you know that "Orange-Pekoe" comes from several tea-producing countries and that it can be good, bad or indifferent? Do you know that the words "Orange-Pekoe" have nothing to do with orange or orange blossoms?

Mark this! Here is what "Orange-Pekoe" really means! It is merely a trade name for a tea leaf resulting from a sifting process black tea undergoes in manufacture. Green tea is never made into "Orange-Pekoe" form.

Tea connoisseurs consider it more important to know where the tea is grown rather than if it is merely "Orange-Pekoe." And why? Because India grows the finest tea in the world.

When you choose tea... ask for India Tea. And if you have been using "Orange-Pekoe" tea... insist on INDIA ORANGE-PEKOE. To be sure you get genuine India Tea, look for the Map of India on the package of tea you buy! It is put there for your guidance!

WOMAN PSES AS WIFE OF GRADUATOR

Leaves Package at Spot Designated in Letters, But No One Collected It

A cleverly conceived police trap failed yesterday to trap the persons who sent letters to the home of Malcolm Greenough, in which $2500 was demanded on threats to mutilate Greenough's three-year-old daughter.

A woman impersonating Mrs. Greenough, who had a baby carriage through Jack Fay arrested, but the would-be extortionists failed to put in an appearance.

DECOY PACKAGE LEFT
The second letter to the Greenough home at 415 Beacon st. directed that the package of money should be dropped at the Boylston st. entrance to the Public Garden. A dummy was dropped to the sidewalk by the woman impersonating Mrs. Greenough yesterday afternoon, in accordance with the instructions, but it was not picked up during the walk for a long time while plain clothes men waited.

The identity of the person who took the $2500 from Mrs. Greenough was not made known, but it was understood it was a young woman who volunteered her services to Police Inspectors John A. Dorsey and George Y. August. The real Mrs. Greenough and Little Lawrence R. Greenough born December 11, were safely secluded from chances of harm.

WOMAN'S WRITING
Handwriting on the two letters has been turned over to two handwriting experts, Mayor John D. Dever of Malden and two street and water commission of that city and John McCourt Company, contractor, brought to restrain carrying out of a contract awarded for paving of Lebanon st.

The full bench of the Supreme Judicial Court has reversed the decision of the Superior Court, sustaining defendant's demurrer and dismissing the bill, and ordered the demurrer overruled.

The full bench says it was the duty of the city officials, in carrying out the work to furnish, in compliance with the city ordinances, detailed specifications respecting the method of construction and materials and proportions to be used. The full court says that to permit each bidder to furnish his own specifications for the construction of the wearing surface might lead to substantial variations in the manner of construction, and would defeat genuine and fair competition.

After the case was submitted to the full bench on briefs, the plaintiffs' counsel urged that a woman was left out in the record process of the court in the case of the defendant between the word "the" and "which" in the contract appearing in the original advertisement, but not in the copy put before the court. The full bench, as the president of the court, said that the matter was immaterial as far as the matter before the court for decision is concerned.

Outcome May Hang on Missive Sent From France in March, 1928

"Widow" or "Dutiful daughter?"

The letter, which was dated March 1928, was read to the jury, with a codicil added in 1928, in neither of which Mrs. French was mentioned.

The issue of the Stearns estate was read into the records as $225,000 in personal property, real estate in New York, and mortgages and $300,000 in real estate. The hearing will continue tomorrow.

LANNING

with GEORGE UNDERWOOD

BROUILLARD A BIT
LIKE DEMPSEY OF
HAM AND BEAN ERA

UNTIL SEEN in action against a smart fighter, a boxer with fighting brain and ring generalship, final judgment can not be passed on Lou Brouillard. But the Worcester boy doesn't appear the type of a ring man to be felled into downouts or made to look amateurish by a seasonedrapper. Many good judges of boxers believe when it comes time to put Larruping, Lou through the acid test he will show pure fighting gold. He looks more like Jack Dempsey, when the Manassas Mauler first broke into the game, than any youngster that has come up in years.

The difference between Brouillard and Dempsey when Jack was a Ham and Beaner is that Lou is a southpaw, Larruping a right-hander. Larruping, Lou doesn't come bobbing, weaving in, in the old picture Dempsey shuffle, which filled the Man Killer to get full hog and swing leverage behind each punch, with one blow always "cocking" him for another.

But, like Dempsey, Brouillard is a punch, rugged, slashing, two-fisted young fighting animal with dynamite in both hands and the "killer" instinct in his heart. Lou is a "finisher" born as a wolf in the blood and savage as a lion at the kill when he has his man cornered. The latter instinct was the great value of Dempsey's ring skills.

Young Lou Brouillard just now is a crude, green, unseasoned, inexperienced lad, who if rushed prematurely to matches with smart fighters might be made to look only like a young fighter who has never been in the ring. But if he is given time to develop into the high class fighting man the fans so long have heard of and the game so addicted to.

BOXING SUFFERS FROM DRY ROT

BOXING is suffering from dry rot. It is seen too much of the old familiar faces. There isn't a "fighter" among the lot. From the heavyweights down to the flyweights, with the one exception of Jimmy McLarnin, there isn't a young fighter with color and dash. Mickey Walker had color and plenty of it and was a great fighter. But Snelling Mayev has passed the peak and is heading down the trail to the back yard.

The team in coming for "another Dempsey."

Maybe Larruping Lou Brouillard has color and color enough to "another Dempsey."

When Dempsey broke into the game he weighed more than 160 pounds. The Worcester boy, Larruping Lou, weighs about 150 pounds. He isn't a young fighter with color and dash. Mickey Walker had color and plenty of it and was a great fighter. But Snelling Mayev has passed the peak and is heading down the trail to the back yard.

The Manassas Mauler isn't the team at more than 160 pounds. He fought ten rounds against Wild Bill McHenry and lost. He lost in the old carnage in the Bronx where Billy C. won and the Fatman A. C. used to hold forth. He wasn't more than a couple of pounds heavier when he was ten terrific frames with the giant Andre.

Dempsey put 216 for the fight with Kenny, and lost that a bond for the one with Anderson. Think of the millions he made after that.

The Ham and Bean fighter of today isn't the champion of the world tomorrow.

It is of such stuff as Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, champions are made of.

He is too promising a prospect to be ruined in the making. We don't know who manages or handles him, but we do hope they will nurse the youngster along, and have brains enough to wait. For every young fighter made into a top flight prize in a hundred are spoiled in the making.

LOOKING OVER RING PROSPECTS
THERE NEVER was a time when boxing needed new faces more than the present, never a time when there were so many yawning gaps in title ranks waiting to be filled. The trouble is that there also never was a time when there seemed to be so few classy youngsters knocking at the door. Good young fighters are as scarce as hen's teeth.

There are a few who bear promise, like the little Jake Zeman of Lynn among the lightweights and even among the middleweights. New York has two mighty prospects in young Nicky Brancatelli and young Nicky Brancatelli.

PRINCETON TO RACE

By BILL CONNELL

Harvard and Princeton will meet in an athletic event of major importance for the first time since the sports break between the institutions in 1927, when the two colleges take part in a triangular crew race with M. I. T. on May 2 in the Charles River Basin.

The bringing together by M. I. T. of Harvard and Princeton in a crew race is only the first step, many think, toward the resumption of full athletic relations although the reorganizing of the Big Three on its old basis is still a long way off.

Tech arranged for the regatta with Princeton, and then authorities of the Institute acted to bring Harvard into the regatta, thus bridging a gap between Harvard and Princeton many thought would not be closed for years to come.

Princeton and Harvard May Heal Breach

The scheduling of the triangular crew race, an event which will attract much attention, is the first successful attempt to bridge the gap between Harvard and Princeton since the breach of 1927.

M. I. T. authorities are receiving the congratulations of the two colleges who have always wanted to see Harvard and Princeton differences settled permanently.

Harvard and Princeton Make No Move

A significant thing about the meeting of the crews is that neither Harvard nor Princeton made any move to bring about the race. Each merely accepted the invitation of a third party. Tech broke in a regatta on the Charles apart the Crimmon and Tiger apart the Crimmon and Tiger are not yet settled, and there really is no immediate prospect of resumption of dual meeting relations.

Blackhawks Near Revolt Over Strict Training Rules

By BILL GRIMES

After starting the season with five consecutive victories, the Chicago Blackhawks have slipped alarmingly and the fans throughout the Calder loop have been trying to fathom the cause for the reversal of form.

During the first fortnight of the N. H. L. championship race, the Hawks snared 11 points but in the last five weeks, they have been unable to better the showing they made in the first six games. In the last 13 games, the Windy City team they have defeated. The Philadelphia Quakers contribute two games in the Chicago cause and the New York Americans and Ottawa were their victims.

On the other hand, the Maroons, Detroit and Toronto have scored two wins over the Hawks. The Bruins did a terrible job on them at the Garden on Tuesday night.

Chicago Forwards Lightest in League

The Chicago forwards are in all probability, the lightest in the National Hockey League. It was evident during the Hawks' first visit to the Garden that the team would not be able to hold the pace they set against the Bruins. For as they attack as relentlessly and furiously as the Hawks, there is but one weak point which will attract much attention, is the first successful attempt to bridge the gap between Harvard and Princeton since the breach of 1927.

M. I. T. authorities are receiving the congratulations of the two colleges who have always wanted to see Harvard and Princeton differences settled permanently.

The Hawks are under orders to resign of athletic relations in the triangular race on the Charles may well be the big step needed eventually to make the Crimmon and Tiger annual opponents in football and other major sports.

Tomorrow on WB2A in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray"

Announcement by the National Broadcasting Company has just been made that Mr. Patrick Campbell, Eva Le Gallienne and Rollo Peters are among the legitimate theater artists who will play leading engagements with the NBC Radio Guild Company during its January schedule of Friday afternoon microphone malinches.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," Arthur Pinero's exposition of the problem faced by the "woman with a past" who marries in high society, will be Mrs. Campbell's vehicle to-morrow afternoon at 4 p. m. heard over WB2A. Mrs. Campbell will debut the little role when the play had its debut in London at the turn of the century, and it is probably the most famous part of her theatrical career.

Miss Le Gallienne, protagonist of New York's Clivia Hesperus Theater, and Rollo Peters will costar in the Radio Guild production of "Romeo and Juliet" heard January 8. Peters has long been identified with the role of Romeo, having last played opposite Jane Cowl in the role.

Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel" will be heard on the radio on January 23, according to present plans. The production will close with a presentation of "The Merchant of Venice" January 30. Present plans call for a production of "The Sign of the Cross" on January 31.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

We shall take for a short discussion today the subject of Leo Sims, who has been enjoying the privilege of the gentlemen's acquaintance; nor have we any doubt that he has been enjoying a little extra publicity. It is merely by the fact that we are all somewhat ignorant of the lives of people who are considerably in the public eye, wondering how they got that way, and as we have no better subject to discuss, we will turn to the subject of interest which concerns the distinguished Mr. Sims, we believe will interest you as it has us.

When we hear and read of the large sums of money earned by the famous Sims, we are inclined to be somewhat envious; we know only of their present wealth and how slight of the fact that in about every case they have achieved enormous wealth through scheming ruses. And Leo Sims is a fair example of what most of the artists of this age have undergone before climbing.

One day this Leo Sims, radio personality, was seen strutting through Chicago's streets at a express office after the performance.

When organs came in, Sims became an organist in theaters and played in the same manner. He was born in Champaign, Ill. He was a very poor boy, and he never was playing a piano and claims that he never had a piano. He never had to be forced to practice by fond parents.

Down and out in Chicago, however, got up, a friend suggested that he might be able to get a job purchasing piano rolls. He was given a job at $10 a week. His employers apologized for the low salary, but he says not to mind that he would have been glad to take it.

That evening, to repay the kindness of his friend, he phoned, he went up to the studio of WTAS, now non-existent, and played a piano roll for the station "plunger." The owner of the station heard him and offered him $75 a week for regular work.

And that, briefly, is the story of Leo Sims. He is probably Chicago's busiest radio entertainer. He maintains a piano shop, and he has been featured on two Columbia System programs. He has figured that

The next day he had two jobs and his total salary had risen to $125 a week within eight hours.

During the day he made piano player rolls, and in the evening he played for the radio. The first job brought him $50 a week, and the second $75. He has been playing for radio ever since, but he has several other jobs now, too, besides his regular position over the Columbia System.

HE'S GIMES TO THE PIANO PLAYER

Back in the old days he played in a nickelodeon in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Those were the days of "The Perils of Pauline" and the two-reel thrillers. They also were the days when the pianist swept out the theater as part of his job, and carried him to the
